Lindab introduces RdBX: Steel partitions made easy

Lindab announces an innovation to add to the portfolio of construction products - the new Lindab RdBX partition wall profiles. Lindab RdBX is a solution that simplifies wall construction and makes assembling partition walls faster, simpler and more flexible than ever before.

The new Lindab RdBX stud reduces on-site assembly time. The system has been developed so that the studs and runners easily can be clicked together. Once the runners are in place, the studs can be fastened without tools or fasteners, and the solution offers improved ergonomic conditions while working. A patent application has been made and the system has been launched in Scandinavia in January 2008.

Same benefits, simply faster

Lindab RdBX provides the same solution as the well-known Lindab RdB profiles, only faster. The new studs have evolved from the existing RdB™ studs used for partition walls and share the same characteristics. The system is delivered to the building site as a complete solution, with the parts already marked up and cut to the lengths required.

"The studs are lightweight, rigid and sound-proof," says Johan Andersson, Product Manager, Lindab Profile. "But the real advantage of the new RdBX studs are the reduced assembly times. We know that time is important on building sites and tests show that the new studs help reduce on-site assembly times by nearly half. At the same time, the new system means less time spent measuring and positioning the studs and fewer errors as a result of incorrect measurements," he adds.
